One Stop Shopping with Style

"The ideal location for a wood stove is close to the center of the area to be heated, this gives the best heat distribution. Avoid locating it near an exterior wall as this increases the heat loss to the outside, and decreases the heat gained from the stove."

Modular Stoves

The Modular wood burning stove from Spartherm is a versatile home heater with four distinct bench options. The zero-clearance firebox can be placed on the bench or inside an existing open hearth. An environmentally friendly heating option that lets you burn a clean fire in your home. High quality craftsmanship combined with the finest materials offers quality that you can rely on.

Firewood 101

Get more bang for your buck by burning these select woods.

The hottest burning wood is Hardwood. Woods like elm, hickory, oak, maple and most furit trees are the best burning woods that will give you the hottest and longest burning time. Because hard wood burns more slowly, there is less clean up required and once the fire is out, less build up in the chimney.
