Spring Stove Cleaning

If you burn your fireplace regularly, the firebox will surely need a cleaning. Most contemporary wood burning stoves have an airwash system that helps keep the glass clean, but it will still need a touch up after some burn time.

- Lay down a small tarp to catch any stray ash or rely on your floor plate to do the job.
- Have a brush and pan on hand to sweep out the ash build up. Place this in a prepared paper bag and discard.
- Dip a moist paper towel in some fine ash and rub the glass in a circular motion. Wipe off with a clean moist paper towel. For tough spots leave the paste on for a bit longer then repeat.

"There's something mesmerizing and soothing about sitting by a roaring fire in a serene setting. The flaming reds, oranges, and yellows exude a warmth and ambiance that invite you to slow down and simply be in the company of good friends or a good book. The more you get lost in the moment fireside, the deeper conversation goes and the more you forget the worries of life."
